Welcome to the next level of Mathematical Finance in the heart of Lisbon.

If you think mathematics is the language of modern business, being fluent in it is almost imperative. That's why ISEG launched a Masters in Mathematical Finance, in 2013. The master's insightful programme aims to develop students' mathematical and computational skills and increase their ability to work on financial modelling.

Throughout the Masters in Mathematical Finance, ISEG's students will benefit from having contacts with financial institutions, by attending seminars with top-level practitioners and through internships in financial companies, which often lead to offers of employment.

It's the perfect fit for business visionaries, present and future.

Top 7 reasons to do a Masters in Mathematical Finance @ISEG Lisbon

01.

The establishment of an international agreement with two other masters in the area of Mathematical Finance: one at the University of Lorraine, Nancy (France) and one at Uniwersytet Ekonomiczny w Poznaniu (Poland). This allows students to study part of their degree at these universities, obtaining a double degree.

02.

Students have often been recruited by prominent companies whilst still preparing their Master's Final Work.

03.

Provides a thorough training in modern mathematical and computational finance.

04.

High quality of the academic staff of this Masters, all of whom hold PhDs from prestigious universities.

05.

This Masters also prepares students for further doctoral studies and for carrying out innovation and scientific research in universities or companies.

06.

Students are put in contact with the most important technical and quantitative topics of finance, both theoretical and applied.

07.

A partnership of the Masters in Mathematical Finance and the Advanced Risk and Portfolio Management Bootcamp - ARPM, at the University of New York, allows students who participate in the bootcamp to obtain not only an ARPM certificate but also a mention in the supplement to their Masters Diploma.
