The PhD in Economic and Social History was created by Universidade Técnica de Lisboa in 1991, and was subsequently adapted to European higher education in 2009. It is a 3rd Cycle degree that aims to teach and produce original research in the field of Economic History.

The degree aims to train specialists who have a high capacity of interpretation and response to the economic and social transformations over time and in the interaction between the chronological, geographical and social aspects of these transformations.

- > Economic History;
- > Business History;
- > Social History;
- > Economic Thinking History.

STUDY METHODOLOGY

A proposal regarding the research topic of the PhD thesis is presented by the candidate before an examination panel. After being accepted for the programme, a supervisor is appointed, to tutor the student during the in-depth preparation of their thesis project during the 1st Year. The thesis project is presented and discussed during the Research Seminar.

At the end of the 1st Year, a consolidated version of the thesis project is assessed by an examination panel appointed by the Programme Coordinator. The panel will confirm its recommendation and may suggest alterations, or recommend that the student discontinue their studies. When the thesis project is accepted, it is then registered and the name of the supervisor is confirmed. The process of preparing, researching and writing a thesis lasts for two academic years, according to the Rules and Regulations for ISEG PhD Programmes.

PhD in Economic and Social History, 2015
Economist

I understand that the evolution of a career must be accompanied by a continual improvement of one's academic education, especially as we live in a world where the labour market is becoming increasingly competitive. Thus, given my interest in issues related to the Economic and Social History of Portugal, in particular those relating to the 'Estado Novo', I chose to study for a PhD in this area. I chose the ISEG PhD in Economic and Social History, not only because of the indisputable experience and quality of its professors, but also on account of the fact that ISEG is the oldest and most traditional School of Economics in Portugal.
